The ALS Association, a nonprofit that funds research and supports patient care and education, said that Stella’s voluntary donation to the charity could someday help in the treatment of other diseases. “I think it’s very important to contribute to the center, because it’s a gift that is so important for the future,” Stella shared.

“I think that we’ll learn a lot and find new means of treatment.” According to the ALS Association, more than 30,000 people around the world are living with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, a disease that attacks the nerve cells in the brain and the spinal cord and leads to motor neuron degeneration. “This means loss of all voluntary muscle control and most importantly, loss of stamina and endurance,” the organization’s mission statement says. “The lives of patients affected are dramatically and rapidly shortened by the relentless progression of the disease.” and the risk of IVF treatment and pregnancy loss \[[@B11]\]. The awareness of the population can significantly reduce the desire to become pregnant. In a study conducted by

Christopher M. Tapp \[[@B19]\], knowledge of the PGP results was found to have a significant effect on women's decision to have another child. Fear of exposure to INF-gamma before injection increases the desire to have another baby \[[@B20]\]. In this study, 12% of the respondents thought that INF-gamma injection increases risk of HIV infection and this statistic is in agreement with the outcome of a similar study in Nigeria \[[@B21]\]. There was a belief that the chance of having another baby is higher among men than women \[[@B22]\] and this understanding was found to be significant among our study population. Further, there was a belief that the chance of getting pregnant before the next IVM cycle is higher among couples who have previously had an abortion \[[@B9]\]. One reason is that pregnancy is a painful process which will negatively
