You can find a link to each game, a rating and brief description in the list below. So I started writing this post about a month ago, and it's still not finished. It's been extremely hard to focus on a topic when there are literally hundreds of games released each week. Eventually I started randomly picking games, rating and writing brief descriptions. What's new:

Trip Of The Year Last Friday marked the winter solstice, and eight hours further north of Melbourne, the sun set at 7pm, with the temperature plummeting to near-20 degrees. It was a beautiful night, on the verge of getting beautiful again, just like we experienced in December the year before. In Melbourne, we had a small party of friends and family, all excited, happy, and surprised to have such good weather. The next day was sunny, something that had been in danger of not being the case for the past month. Mostly this was thanks to some huge high pressure systems over the southern half of the United States, which had been nudging our jet stream south. Had this path been across the northern half, we would have experienced glorious snowfall, undoubtedly providing some great sensations to like never before. The features of the weather that we were experiencing were the source of a lot of winter wonder, for us, and many of the stories we could tell you had to do with 'Super Blue Blood Moon', 'Double Green Moon', and other experiences we could never have imagined. But the weather wasn't the only thing to be excited by during this beautiful time in the northern hemisphere. With the sun getting a little brighter in the coming days, we'll be enjoying spectacular views of Saturn and Proxima Centauri. With the very end of the longest days during the winter solstice came our thought: What is the longest distance we will travel to during the winter solstice 2018? It's true that the fall and winter seasons are the longest, and sometimes the most lonely, and we often take ourselves away on holidays for much of that time. But the winter solstice is a time to be on the move, and to be heading somewhere warmer, right now, and soon. Traversing the Landslide We seem to make some long rides at this time of the year, and there have been quite a few to come out of it over the last few years. 2012 still remains the year of the Landslide, and July and August of this year were the months it was announced. And now we must recount the Landslide to mark an even longer trip. We began an eight-hour gravel ride just west of Kalgoorlie, in 2012, and we were supported by a film crew, with dramatic television
