It is the first and only vaccine that protects against these three types of HPV that can cause cancer. Although there are other HPV vaccines, the company’s Gardasil is the most well-known one and is already on the market. Gardasil is a combination of two vaccines and is considered the first and only truly effective vaccine against the three types of HPV that cause genital warts and cancers. The first vaccine, Gardasil, is recommended for girls and boys from the age of nine years and is regarded as very safe and effective in preventing HPV infections. Why it’s not a household name The newest vaccine, Cervarix, is also on the market but only for women who already have, or are at high risk of, cervical cancer. Compared with Gardasil, Cervarix requires three doses over a long period – two doses six months apart, and a booster dose 12 to 18 months later – making it less attractive for use by men, or young boys who are at risk of HPV infection. Our opinion Considering it has a similar safety record as Gardasil, there is no reason it shouldn’t be

Some time after they fought, Elia and Utgar went to a safe spot and decided to rest there for a while. Utgar leaned back against a tree and closed his eyes. He started to feel a cold sensation in his body, it felt like cold water flowing through his veins. Suddenly his head started to ache and he felt dizzy. He panicked and opened his eyes, as a girl he had not seen before was standing in front of him. Utgar realized he was in this ancient, desolate forest, that the cold running water was the waterfall nearby and that the girl was the goddess, Irial.

Irial was gazing at him. "..... "Utgar, you were a warrior from the Dark Dragon Empire, right?" She asked.

"You flew high in the sky when you were about to attack the golden cities with your army, I suppose." Utgar said as he looked down to the distance.
