The bill, which would have paved the way for amnesty for several prisoners, is under review at the country's Constitutional Commission. The proposed amnesty law would have pardoned a number of political prisoners, including the opposition leader for the governing ZANU-PF party, Michael Sata, who was in hiding for more than a year. The pardoning proposal sparked outrage and global condemnation from human rights groups, who said the measure was aimed at those who had committed politically-motivated acts, and not those who had committed genuine crimes. The amnesty bill was designed to be fast-tracked to address pressing issues in the Southern African nation, where there have been sporadic protests in recent years. Critics say the bill undermines the principles of justice and fairness. Mr Sata has been based in a hotel in the Portuguese province of Mozambique since the country's president, Lungisani Cuziba, revoked his house arrest in May last year. The government

Ã¢Â□Â□Because the Coast Guard is seizing ships at an abnormally high rate, the DHSÃ¢Â□Â□s Maritime Security mission has decreased its fleet from 68 vessels to 35 and its crew from 13,500 to just over 12,000. Can you say the same about the Canadian Coast Guard? I read in a news article a few years ago that the Canadian Coast Guard alone had about 150 vessels in service. Ã¢Â□Â□Many of the Coast GuardÃ¢Â□Â□s smaller vessels are aging and reaching the end of their useful service lives,Ã¢Â□Â□ the article said. Ã¢Â□Â□Moreover, the Coast Guard budget has been reduced. I wonder what effect this has had on the Canadian Coast Guard. Ã¢Â□Â□The Canadian Coast GuardÃ¢Â□Â□s new budget is just one-quarter of what it was in 2007. Whither the Canadian Coast Guard?Ã¢Â□Â□ However, I don't read this as being the new reality, but rather a preference to operate smaller vessels and a commitment to operate in support of the Coast Guard for at least the foreseeable future. Your comments would be appreciated. NOTE: I am not an expert on the subject, I am simply trying to understand. Ã¢Â□Â□While more than a quarter of the Coast GuardÃ¢Â□Â□s 35 vessels are capable of dealing with incidents along the entire Great Lakes, the vast majority are more suited to working in freshwater as opposed to the open ocean. TheyÃ¢Â□Â□re big enough to handle the open water, but so small that they canÃ¢Â□Â□t cover the Great Lakes. And the newest models are even smaller.Ã¢Â□Â□ (Financial Post, Nov. 11, 2008). Or maybe it was the Canadians who created the idea of a Coast Guard being the world's largest protecting force with a fleet of 59 vessels and 2
