In FIFA, the player's acceleration, power and velocity combine to make each shot a unique and authentic experience for every player. The football simulations in FIFA 22 are more powerful than ever before. Players must react to high velocity kicks and can execute more dribbles with greater control to beat better defenders. What's more, the ball is smarter than ever before. It "reads" crowd noise and weather conditions to make tackles, passes and shots more accurate. In addition to the overall football power in FIFA 22, gameplay improvements have been implemented to make every shot more realistic. Players on both offense and defense can receive the ball, control the ball at any time, set up attacks, make tackles and even execute "screamers" on the goal line. "We have listened to the feedback from our players and we have introduced a number of gameplay enhancements to FIFA 22," said Ian Gooding, Creative Director, EA SPORTS™ FIFA. "The strength of the game is the result of our data and our research into how the game actually plays, and in collaboration with our teams we've made great strides in improving the way the game is played." I personally don't like the new Laser Assisted Assists. I just don't think they are accurate. I hated the Reds they had in the previous season's version of FIFA. They were done very well but just weren't accurate enough. That's why they have been canned from this year's games. You can see the difference here By the way, this is what the default laser assist will look like in FUT this year. Only one player in the entire game has it enabled. One thing I really like is the ability to unlock a skin by performing a small skit. It doesn't have a chance for making me dislike any team but it's a welcome change from having to earn a skin by winning a match. You can watch the skit here The most spectacular changes this year for me is replacing of the overly simple, boringly bright colors of past versions for more visually pleasing, often muted, colors.
