netsupport manager 12.30.0 update february 28th, 2020 - we have discovered that netsupport manager is a final payload in the parrot tds campaign. this campaign is used as a gateway for further malicious campaigns. one of the known campaigns is called fakeupdate. in this campaign, cybercriminals use deceptive websites (sites claiming that some software is outdated) to trick visitors into downloading malicious code. netsupport manager is part of the second-phase payload delivered in the fakeupdate campaign. the netsupport manager can be used for many purposes, such as remote support, remote data backup, remote access to remote computers, remote desktop, remote file sharing, remote camera, remote printing, remote control of a remote system, remote monitoring, and other uses. however, the software can be used by cyber criminals to steal information from computers and mobile devices. it can also be used by hackers to gain access to computers, mobile devices, and network resources. any program that you download and install should be run in an elevated security context. however, even if you run a program in an elevated security context, there are many programs that automatically escalate your security context to administrator. this is a serious security breach that can allow hackers to access or modify your computer. it is an application that connects to remote computers over the internet. it can monitor multiple computers simultaneously, and thus can help in remote pc support. it supports all major platforms like windows, mac, linux, ios, android, etc. there are many features that can be found in netsupport manager. you can view the system inventory, you can monitor your hard disks, you can manage applications, and you can also view the system performance. it also allows you to record the screen and playback it later. it is also known as the remote desktop sharing program. it offers a clean and user-friendly interface.
